

WHAT IS GENERAL BUSINESS?

General business is about flexibility and gaining a broad knowledge of the business world. In the certificate program, you will complete a core of required business classes in subjects such as accounting, legal environment, and computer information systems. Then you will round out your studies with any business courses that peak your interest!

Because the general business program covers subjects that are not focused on a specific area, graduates can be qualified for entry-level positions in almost any business field.

The general business program is also a good choice for students who are undecided about their business pathway. By completing the CCL, students can learn about many different topics to discover a career or degree area that best works for them.

Create your own business program!

The General Business Certificate (CCL) and Associate of Applied Science (AAS) have been designed to let you choose your own areas of business focus. After taking some required courses, you can choose any combination of business classes to complete your CCL or AAS.

Want to study marketing and management, in a single certificate? Or social media, sales and real estate? Or even just a little bit of everything related to business? The general business programs let you choose!
